

Michael Dennis, PhD. and Christy Scott, Ph.D.

Mike Dennis and Chris Scott are two colleagues at Chestnut Health Systems' research division (Lighthouse Institute) who have exerted a great influence on my thinking about addiction treatment and recovery. Their Chicago-based research studies on long-term recovery and the value of recovery management check-ups have been particularly valuable. The article from their work I have chosen to post here as an introduction to their work illustrates their sweeping knowledge of the scientific literature and their abilities to draw from scientific studies important implications for policy and clinical practice. Other publications by Drs. Dennis and Scott are posted at http://www.chestnut.org/LI/staff_pub/index.html
